disabilities who experience an unfair housing practice, discrimination in places of public accommodation, or a violation of their civil rights with the general protections under the Colorado anti-discrimination act (CADA) for all protected classes. With the consolidation of these provisions, the allowable remedies under CADA include a court order requiring compliance with the applicable section of CADA, actual monetary damages, attorney fees and costs, damages for noneconomic loss or injury, and a statutory fine of $5,000 per aggrieved party and per violation. An award of damages for noneconomic loss or injury is capped at $50,000, and if a defendant is a small business, it is entitled to a 50% reduction of a noneconomic loss or injury award if it corrects the violation within 30 days of the complaint being filed and did not knowingly or intentionally make or cause to be made the violation.

The bill also extends the deadline for filing a charge with the Colorado civil rights commission alleging discrimination in places of public accommodation or discriminatory advertising from 60 days to one year after the alleged discriminatory act occurred.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Colorado:

SECTION 1. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly finds and declares that:

(a) Coloradans with disabilities continue to face discrimination in places of public accommodation, including by publication of discriminatory advertising related to those places;

(b) The inability of individuals with disabilities to recover compensatory damages in a civil action for certain discriminatory and unfair practices diminishes the reality of the harm done by such discriminatory acts and robs the individuals with disabilities of the opportunity to be made truly whole;

(c) Particularly in light of a recent United States Supreme Court decision concluding that emotional distress damages could not be implied under the federal spending clause anti-discrimination statutes, it is necessary to protect the rights of Coloradans with disabilities by expressly

1 and unambiguously making compensatory damages, including for
2 pecuniary and nonpecuniary losses, available as a remedy in a civil action
3 for certain discriminatory and unfair practices; and

4 (d) In an effort to protect all Coloradans from acts of 5 discrimination and ensure equal access to justice to those who are 6 discriminated against, the general assembly finds that it is necessary to 7 merge the remedy sections of the Colorado anti-discrimination act.
