

Ethical and Legal Issues in Supervision: Technology and NASW Best Practices Syllabus

Program Description

Ethical and Legal Issues in Supervision: Technology and NASW Best Practices is a program designed to help participants review the National Association of Social Work best practices regarding social work supervision and technology, and successfully demonstrate understanding by passing a quiz. This program includes information about clinical supervision models, practices, and processes for clinical social workers. In addition, it will cover ethical decision-making models directly related to counseling practice and supervision and effective and ethical utilization of social media.

Program Learning Objectives

The program content will:

1. Provide a basic overview of the of the latest version (2017) of the NASW, ASWB, CSWE, & CSWA Standards for Technology in Social Work Practice.
2. Review key information about confidentiality and technology as described in Texas Health and Safety Code Title 7 Chapter 611, and Texas State Board of Examiners of Social Workers.
3. Create an awareness of ethical issues specific to supervising trainees who are using technology to deliver direct services to clients.
4. Create an awareness of ethical issues specific to supervising trainees using technology.
5. Offer information so participants can successfully pass a quiz over the topics covered in this course.

Program Goals

Participants successfully completing this three-hour program will:

1. Understand the qualities that define ethical clinical supervision using technology.
2. Understand how to choose and implement technology-based supervision interventions based on knowledge of the trainee's needs and developmental growth.
3. Know how to mitigate potential ethical issues related to trainees utilizing technology to deliver direct services to clients.
4. Complete a quiz demonstrating confident application and understanding of the content of this course.
