Course Description:

Foreign policy stands at the nexus of domestic politics and international relations. This course is designed to familiarize students with U.S. foreign policy from three basic perspectives: history, politics, and current events. While instruction and materials focus on U.S. foreign policy, the tools acquired and insights developed in the course should be applicable to other countries as well.

Course structure is dictated by the limited duration of instruction and by the three perspectives: Lectures will alternate focus on either politics and policy, or on the history of U.S. foreign policy. A review and debate of current events and issues of foreign policy will be ongoing. We will carve out part of each session for a discussion on evolving contemporary topics (Afghanistan, China).

Course Requirements:

- Class Participation (20% of course grade): Come to class. We will be taking attendance through the quizzes (see below). There will be opportunities to comment on the materials, on the lecture, and on current events. You are encouraged to ask questions and to discuss your ideas. There is a much larger premium on being willing to talk than on being ‘right.’
- Quizzes (40% of course grade): Held most days. These are short quizzes at the beginning of class. We will ask for brief factual information about the readings. Grading is pass/fail and there are no make-ups. To do well, read the assignments and come to class on time.
- Final Exam (40% of course grade): Essay exam, choice of questions. Bring exam book.

Note #1: Students are encouraged to study and learn together. However, all written assignments must be the sole product of the person submitting the work. Don’t cheat and don’t plagiarize. If you have any questions about what constitutes a violation of academic integrity, please see me.

Note #2: It is your responsibility to apprise me of any factor that may interfere with your ability to perform in this class well in advance of scheduled assignments. Appropriate measures for disabilities and other concerns will be taken in accordance with University of California policy.

Note #3: In order to document requests, students seeking a change of grade must prepare a written memo detailing his or her request and citing reasons for requesting the proposed change.
