COURSE DESCRIPTION
In this course, we will examine intersecting categories of power that have shaped and continue to shape the political, social, cultural, and economic environments and the experiences and identities of groups within the United States. Although the categories of gender, race, ethnicity, and class have long informed feminist political thought, we will also examine further dynamics that have shaped our communities, politics, and identities. The exercise of power has led to the formation of social policies and institutional formations, some of which we will also examine, in order to see both the exercise of power, and resistance to it.

LEARNING OUTCOMES
By the course's end, students will be able to:

1. Understand the basic foundation of intersectionality.
2. Recognize the power dynamics embedded in gender, race, ethnicity, and class.
3. Critically analyze research and experiences that speak to systemic and institutional inequalities entangled in gender, race, ethnicity, and class formation (social construction).

COURSE FORMAT
This course is fully remote and will follow an asynchronous model. Students are expected to be fully engaged in all learning activities and reading materials. Students will rely on the course CANVAS and complete all assignments listed in the ‘module tab.’ These assignments will include a mixture of a pre-recorded mini-lecture, selected readings, short videos, films, podcasts, and course activities. All course assignments will be due each Sunday by 11:59 pm of each week. The pre-recorded lectures will be available each week by Monday morning by 8 am. Students will have an opportunity to engage with each other via virtual interaction, and every Wednesday from 5:00 – 6:00 pm, students are invited to join my work hour via Zoom (please note that this is separate from office hours). This work hour is intended to give students the space to engage with the instructor and each other in real-time. A lecture will not be available during this time, and it is optional to participate. Course Materials
All course materials are on CANVAS.

Student Hours
Student hours will be held via Zoom once a week, on Wednesdays from 11 am - 12 pm. Student hours are by appointment only; it is the student's responsibility to schedule student hours via Calendy. If students need an alternative date and time, please email me to schedule an appointment. Please continue reading for directions on how to schedule student hours.

Scheduling Student Hours

1. Go to

2. Select your preferred date.
3. Select your preferred time.
4. Select confirm.
5. Fill out the requested information and provide a note that indicates the purpose of the appointment.
6. Select scheduled event.
7. Students should automatically receive a Zoom link and calendar invitation to the email provided.
8. If you are not able to meet during the available time slots, please email me directly so we can schedule an alternative date and time.

TEACHING METHODS
This course will rely on various teaching methods beyond traditional practices of lecturing. Students can expect a range of individual reflections, small and large group discussion boards and activities, interactive activities (i.e., Google Draws and Padlet), watching films/videos/short clips, and memes/GIFs, for example. Students are encouraged to bring their full selves to the course and draw from their lived experiences navigating the education system and those in their communities.

COURSE EXPECTATIONS
Students are expected to think critically about the course material and actively participate and engage in this course. To be successful in this course, students are expected to view each pre-recorded lecture (posted on CANVAS) and complete all module sections and activities for the course. Students are required to complete all course readings and graded assignments. Further, please make sure to talk to the instructor if you have any questions or concerns. My role is to support you throughout this learning experience.

*Please note you are an essential part of this course, and your voice and opinions matter.

ACCOMMODATIONS
Please feel free to contact me if you need accommodations due to a disability. When you contact me, please provide your current Authorization for Accommodation (AFA) letter issued by the Office for Students with Disabilities (OSD). We will work out accommodations that will support your learning.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY AND GRADING POLICY
Students are expected to complete all assignments individually, and all submitted assignments must be the original work of the student. Any detection of intentional plagiarism will be reported to the university and result in the automatic failure of this course. Assignments submitted on Canvas through Turnitin will be examined for plagiarism.

Due to the quick nature of the summer session, assignments must be submitted on time. Assignments will be graded within five days from the due date.
LATE ASSIGNMENTS
Students have one excused late assignment. Students have 24 hours from the due date to submit their late work. This assignment must be submitted via CANVAS in the assignments section under “Late Assignment.” This policy does not apply to the course final. If your assignment is submitted after the 24-hour grace period, it will result in an automatic zero. Except for one excused late work, no additional assignments will be excused.
