

7th Annual Savannah Traffick Jam

Lindsey Cheatham

Lindsey Cheatham has dedicated her career to serving victims of crime by providing a trauma-informed approach to responding to sexual assault, child abuse and human trafficking cases. Lindsey is the State of Georgia's Human Trafficking Victim Advocate assigned to the Georgia Bureau of Investigation's Human Exploitation and Trafficking Unit. In her role, she has worked collaboratively with both sex and labor trafficking cases to ensure that the system's response is victim centered. Lindsey has been described as a "phenomenon" in her ability to simultaneously connect with law enforcement and crime victims.

Lindsey serves as an advisor to both the Statewide Human Trafficking Task Force and the Georgia Coalition to Combat Human Trafficking. She was previously child and family advocate at Safe Path Children's Advocacy Center.

Lindsey holds a master's degree in Conflict Management at Kennesaw State University. She is a certified advocate through the National Advocate Credentialing Program.
