Enchantment

Life is enchantment. So much of what we see and do in life has a certain magical quality. Have you looked deeply into a rose and stopped to listen to the bird song emanating from the trees? Or perhaps enjoyed the presence of a loving pet in your life?

As children, we experience life as one mystery followed by another. We become absorbed in simple things like splashing in mud puddles or sitting transfixed by one book our parents read to us again and again. These moments can disappear as we mature and become more responsible.

Yet moments of quiet, time spent reading, or even the mesmerizing influence of particular television series or movies can draw us into a sense of enchantment. They put us in touch with something ethereal, emotional, and moving. We sink deeply into what is before us, so much so that nothing else matters for that moment.

Rediscover enchantment in your life. Find ways to be in touch with the simplicity of life. Woodland Chapel offers many ways to engage in service, celebration, and the joy of fellowship. Let this Center for Spiritual Living be an enchanted place where your soul relaxes and your heart is filled.

Love and Blessings Always,

Rev Maur

What is important?

We all want to know how to navigate this life we have been given in the most healthy and joyful way possible. Centers for Spirituel Living, teaches Science of mind which is the best navigator I have found and which I have been sharing for 35 years. . What is Science of Mind?

The core of Science of Mind, as defined by its founder Ernest Holmes, is a synthesis of scientific discoveries, philosophical perspectives, and religious revelations, all applied to human needs and aspirations. We emphasizes the interconnectedness of all things through a Universal Mind, which is seen as synonymous with God. It aims to provide a framework for understanding the world and living a fulfilling life based on positive thinking and the application of spiritual laws.
