I am grateful to report that the Hollywood Theatre successfully weathered 2021 - truly an uncertain and challenging year in our history. When we started the year, we had been closed since March 2020, and still had no idea how much longer we’d remain shuttered. Like so many of our community’s venues and businesses, we were contending with mounting financial strain and worry.

In the face of that uncertainty, we chose to focus on connection and endeavored to share the art of film with you in every way we could. In the spring of 2021, we co-produced a unique outdoor film and music series at The Lot at Zidell Yards. We also renewed our partnership with the Portland Expo Center to bring back the Drive-In Movie Spectacular for its seventh year. Thanks to these partnerships, we knew we could count on offering our audience the opportunity to enjoy our programming safely outdoors. We also used our closure as an opportunity to push forward with the renovation of our lower façade, receiving historic design review approval from the City of Portland in March.

Meanwhile we had an exciting milestone to celebrate - the 30th anniversary of Movie Madness in April. We hosted a livestreamed party with Movie Madness staff and other film fans to revisit the store’s history featuring store founder Mike Clark, who answered audience questions and reminisced about his years behind the counter. We even wrote a book to commemorate 30 years of Movie Madness! More about that on page 16.

In June 2021, venues were given the green light to open again. But first, we had some important people to thank - our steadfast members who supported us through our closure. For the last two weekends in June we scheduled several limited-capacity and socially-distanced screenings for members only. For me, it was an emotional and surreal experience to sit in a theater again and join our members to watch some incredible films like DO THE RIGHT THING, SINGIN’ IN THE RAIN, ALIENS, and RAIDERS OF THE LOST ARK.

For our grand reopening on July 2, 2021, Head Programmer Dan Halsted knew immediately he wanted to premiere the new music documentary (and eventual Oscar winner) SUMMER OF SOUL as our first official film back at the Hollywood. Thanks to our amazing audiences we came back with a bang, selling out multiple screenings and closing out its run with the #2 box office sales in the country. As the year progressed, we ramped up our programming with the outstanding films, original series, and live events we’re known for.

In December we finished the year on solid footing, thanks to you. We were selected as one of just eight theaters in the world to receive a 70mm print of LICORICE PIZZA, and once again finished #2 at the box office in the country - an incredible feat! I can’t tell you how much audience support for our programming means to us. Strong box office receipts make a difference in helping us book the high-demand films you want to see. Thank you for showing up for us, again and again.

Our most heartfelt gratitude goes out to you, our audience, for helping the Hollywood and Movie Madness return strong in 2021.

With gratitude,

Doug Whyte
Executive Director
The Hollywood Theatre is a not-for-profit organization whose mission is to entertain, inspire, educate and connect the community through the art of film while preserving a Portland landmark.

Here, cinema is the ultimate art form - worthy of celebration, study, and preservation. We are well-known for championing the film arts with screenings in 16mm, 35mm, and state-of-the-art digital projection. In addition, we're proud to be the only film venue in Oregon with the capability to regularly project in 70mm format, the most premium movie-viewing experience available.

We have served the local filmmaking community by promoting the work of Oregon filmmakers at our award-winning free microcinema at Portland International Airport. We also provide fiscal sponsorship to more than twenty Oregon-based independent film projects and festivals.

In 2017, we launched a successful crowdfunding campaign to save the legendary Portland video store Movie Madness - now a program of the Hollywood. With its dynamic archive of over 80,000 titles, a myriad of movie memorabilia, and a new community screening room, Movie Madness lives on as an essential resource for film lovers.

During our temporary closure in 2020, we worked to establish new programs that would help us continue to deliver on our mission until we could reopen. One of those was Movie Madness University, a film education and appreciation program. MMU began with virtual lectures and discussions during our temporary closure, but after reopening in 2021, we expanded our offerings to include in-depth four-week seminars and casual curated film series.

We are forever grateful to you - our film community - for not only your steadfast support during our closure, but your unbridled enthusiasm when we finally fully reopened in July 2021. We're still here because of you. Thank you.
Every holiday season, we ask our audience for their favorite Hollywood Theatre experience from the past year. Here are some of our audience’s favorite moments of 2021.

“THERE’S NO PLACE LIKE THE HOLLYWOOD THEATRE”

I got to see SUMMER OF SOUL in 2021. It was my first real outing since the pandemic, and I was so thrilled to be back at the Hollywood! I could feel the excitement around me, and everyone seemed to be having a great time. Watching a film with a room full of people brings a much different experience than watching at home.

- JESSICA K.
My Italian grandfather instilled a love for cinema in me when I was young, taking me to the theatre any and every chance he got. Stand out special movies for us were CINEMA PARADISO and anything with Burt Reynolds (my grandfather also had the Burt mustache, pretty sure that might be the main reason he respected Burt so much). Hollywood played both CINEMA PARADISO and SMOKEY AND THE BANDIT this past year, and since he passed a couple years back it felt so incredibly special to go see our shared favorites on the big screen. I sat silently in CINEMA PARADISO, tears running down my face, remembering my late grandfather and what made me so passionate about film. I truly feel so grateful to Hollywood for allowing me to have such a powerful experience and to honor my grandfather in such a memorable way.

Attending The All Night Horror Movie Marathon after having seen “THE NIGHTMARE BEFORE CHRISTMAS” with the Oregon Symphony! That’s five films in ONE night.

Walking back through the doors to see the first film shown after the closure was so emotional! I’m not afraid to admit that I cried happy tears. The Hollywood Theatre is my home away from home & the place I love to visit most in Portland, so to reconnect with the theater experience was extra special for me.

-ANGELA VOIGT

Finally getting to see THE FRENCH DISPATCH on the big screen after multiple delays to its theatrical release was just what the doctor ordered.

-ANONYMOUS

Getting to see LICORICE PIZZA in 70mm, and was also happy that the Hollywood did a screening of DRIVE MY CAR, a movie I had been wanting to see but that hadn’t been out in any other theaters that I was aware of. I love that the Hollywood has been safe about COVID and that they continue to show smaller-budget films, films from different eras, and more diverse films than your typical movie theater.

-ANONYMOUS

I loved I KNOW WHAT YOU DID LAST SUMMER and 10 THINGS I HATE ABOUT YOU sooo much! I enjoy the preshow introductions and entertainment. Carla Rossi is a great host for queer horror—she’s so welcoming and her makeup scares me.

“Seeing SUMMER OF SOUL as our first post-lockdown movie was so joyous; of course the movie, but also being in the building, celebrating with others, laughing and crying under our masks. It meant Portland was back for me.”

-Kyla Sweet

“I loved the showing of THE GENERAL with the live pipe organ accompaniment. The bonus 1919 FELIX THE CAT cartoon was also a highlight.”

“I was so so so so excited to see THE POWER OF THE DOG in theaters. I convinced a friend to go with me because Campion is one of my favorite directors. To not only see that movie but experience and feel the intensity of it in theaters was amazing. Thank you!”

“My friends rented out the Hollywood Theatre for my birthday. It is one of my favorite places in all of Portland and I got a bit misty eyed going back for the first time since COVID.”

Here at the Hollywood, we champion film as an art form, and we celebrate it by screening original film formats. In 2015, we brought 70mm back to Portland thanks to generous contributions from our audience.

70mm, which reached its pinnacle in the 1960s and '70s, features a greater aspect ratio and higher resolution than traditional 35mm film and is considered by many cinephiles to offer the very best movie-viewing experience available. We are currently the only film venue in Oregon to regularly screen 70mm.

To celebrate our reopening in July 2021, we presented several sold-out 70mm screenings of ONCE UPON A TIME IN HOLLYWOOD, TENET, and our private print of 2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY. In December 2021, we were proud to be one of just eight theaters in the world to receive a 70mm print of Paul Thomas Anderson’s latest film, LICORICE PIZZA. We were the 2nd highest grossing theater in the country during its opening week!
The Portland Horror Film Festival is the premier all-genre horror festival in Portland, and yearly brings to the dark and dreamy Pacific Northwest the best independent short and feature-length horror films from around the world. This year’s fest took place July 28 through August 5, 2021 and served up more than 60 independent horror feature and short films. This nine day carnival of horrors was a hybrid event with in-person screenings at the Hollywood Theatre as well as films, Q&As, and panel discussions streaming online.

PHFF is programmed by festival directors Gwen and Brian Callahan.
Portland Latin American Film Festival (PDXLAFF) is dedicated to showcasing perspectives of Latin American culture through an exploration of Latin film and increasing the visibility of Latin American cinema locally.

For its 15th season in September, October and November 2021, PDXLAFF screened six films from Argentina, Paraguay, Guatemala, Mexico, Brazil, and the United States.

PDXLAFF is a fiscally sponsored project of the Hollywood Theatre. The festival is programmed by Maria Osterroth, PDXLAFF Founder and Director.
THE RETURN OF QUEER HORROR

It’s been called “a goddamn Portland treasure.”* It sells out like clockwork, with nearly 400 queers and allies dressing up and packing into a 96-year-old moviehouse to celebrate horror and queer community. Somehow, it’s still the only LGBTQ+ horror film screening series in the country. And in 2020, we were all set to celebrate Queer Horror’s fifth anniversary—until something happened (hostess Carla Rossi claims it was her microwave that broke) and we were forced to crawl into the crypt.

But in December 2021, after nearly two years away, Queer Horror came back with a vengeance with a sold-out screening of I KNOW WHAT YOU DID LAST SUMMER. Portland’s premier drag clown opened the show with a live rendition of “Science Fiction Double Feature” from THE ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW to welcome her rabid followers back to church, complete with the return of Jason Edward Davis’s art market in the lobby. In a surprise visit following the opening preshow, Carla was even canonized as a saint by the Portland Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence.

After taking part in the Hollywood’s Drive-In Movie Spectacular the last two summers, touring to Stanford University with the short film program Queer Horror: Gravest Hits, and launching Tales from Queer Horror, a webseries presenting Carla Rossi’s scripted preshows, returning to the Hollywood in the flesh left few without teary eyes or stomachs aching from laughter. Queer Horror isn’t just about watching scary movies with an LGBTQ+ bent or horror films from queer creators. It’s about recognizing that the whole genre itself is queer, stemming from the works of the Gothicists and queer filmmakers like F.W. Murnau and James Whale who created visual vocabularies for the monsters we still identify with today. And because Carla is a glutton for punishment, Queer Horror is also about taking Portland drag and burlesque all-stars and giving them four hours to learn a script, get into costume and makeup, and put on a show with an audience that’s never been more ready—all like a mainstage challenge on RuPaul’s Drag Race, but one that celebrates the very best Portland has to offer after seven years building a community that just keeps getting stronger and spookier.

In Fall 2019 we launched a fundraising campaign to help repair and restore our historic lower façade. Originally planned to take place in 2020, construction stalled due to the pandemic. Still, we were able to make some meaningful progress on the project in 2020 and 2021. Director of Facilities Virginia Durost reflects on some exciting discoveries that were made during the course of this project.

The lower façade (the area under the marquee) of the Hollywood Theatre has been ever-changing over the years. Constructed in 1926, the lower façade originally featured colorful, glazed terracotta tile on the walls and an open barrel vault with prism glass windows made to refract the light within and without. By 1934, framed display panels were mounted over the top of the terracotta tiles that faced Sandy Blvd. As of 1959, historic photos show that the walls... below the marquee were entirely enclosed with what appear to be some sort of sign board construction. And in 1965, the theater was closed for remodeling, including building permanent lathe and plaster walls on the lower façade. As the theater’s appearance changed over the decades, a good deal of historic detail and beauty was lost.

In 2016-2017 we undertook a project to replace the aluminum front doors with mahogany doors patterned after the originals. At the start, the project also included removing the 1965 red marble wainscot, patching the walls and repainting. It didn’t take long to uncover signs of water intrusion and masonry failure, and we quickly realized that the lower façade renovation was a much larger project than just patching and painting.

By early 2019, architect Paul M. Falsetto and I had engaged in a number of conversations about the lower façade design. As the year progressed we refined the design and launched a successful fundraising campaign - raising over $150,000 from our generous film community. We were thrilled to finally have the resources to make this project a reality.

And then 2020 happened, with all its attendant complications. Still, we pushed forward. In August of 2020 we were able to proceed with some investigation work. Small access holes were cut out of the lathe and plaster walls. We crossed our fingers in hope that all the beautiful original terracotta had just been covered up.

We didn’t find the wall tile or the columns and cornices for which we had hoped. However, a fortuitous decision to poke my head through the wall opening, limbo style, revealed something else. There above me was color, texture and terracotta! Unbeknownst to Paul and I, there was a complete arch of pristine glazed terracotta tile hidden away above our front entry. Scratching our heads in puzzlement as to why this would ever have been covered up, we immediately resolved that it wouldn’t be any more.

Historic design review, a normally lengthy process (and necessary for our historic building), became even more glacial due to COVID-19. We finally received approval for the project in March of 2021. More investigation holes cut, more measuring and permitting and contract negotiations. We were busy!

In early November 2021, the 1965 walls came down and our jaws dropped. Revealed to us, after fifty-six years hidden, were three original bas reliefs over the front doors and patches of the original terrazzo flooring. It’s not a stretch to say that these were a game changer. Original pieces like this are what you hope for in historic preservation but so rarely find.

We’re thrilled by the architectural discoveries that were made, and can’t wait to unveil a beautifully updated lower façade to our community in 2022.
Movie Madness University is a film appreciation program from the Hollywood Theatre and Movie Madness. Launched as an online program in May 2020, our class offerings now range from in-depth four-week seminars to casual curated film series as well as virtual presentations. The goal of all of our programming is to help people learn more about movies, explore Movie Madness’ world-class collection, and meet like-minded film lovers.

Classes are held at Movie Madness (4320 SE Belmont), in our state-of-the-art Miniplex.

In 2021, we offered a mix of virtual and in-person education, including our first multi-week course in January, the Roger Corman Master Class, which explored Corman’s remarkably diverse and prolific career. Special guests for this series included acclaimed filmmakers John Sayles, Joe Dante, Alex Stapleton, and Peter Bogdanovich, only a year before his passing in January 2022.

Next, we offered a Richard Linklater Master Class that explored how the innovative Austin filmmaker has used time in his work, both as a theme and a filmic element. Special guests for the series included Richard Linklater, Melissa Maerz, and Shawn Levy. We followed that up with Women in Docs, a four-week discussion-based class taught by Kia Geraths, which examined trends and genres in documentary filmmaking through the lens of four films by women directors.

In addition to other outstanding virtual classes and presentations through spring and summer 2021, we began our in-person classes in October with classes on Cult Horror of the 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s; as well as a John Sayles retrospective and a Crash Course focusing on the work of Japanese actor and director ‘Beat’ Takeshi.

Did you know? Hollywood Theatre/Movie Madness members receive discounts on courses and access to our archive of past courses and lectures.
In celebration of the 30th Anniversary of Movie Madness, we wrote a book! Our Director of Education & Community Engagement, Alison Hallett, looks back on how the project came together.

By the end of 2020, it had started to sink in that the pandemic wasn’t going to end anytime soon, and I was looking for a project to help us continue to engage with our film community during the Hollywood’s closure. Since Movie Madness’s 30th anniversary was on the horizon in April 2021, I thought it might be fun to put together "some kind of pamphlet or zine collecting MM history," as I wrote in a half-baked pitch to my boss. Movie Madness is the only surviving video store in a city that once boasted dozens of them; a beloved piece of “Old Portland” in a rapidly changing culture; and a physical media holdout in an era where streaming’s dominance is rarely questioned. Surely there must be something to say about all of this?

My half-baked pitch turned into a full-fledged book. In late 2021, we published Movie Madness: 30 Years Behind the Counter at Portland’s Iconic Video Store. The 60-page book includes everything from a career-spanning interview with store founder Mike Clark to an oral history from past employees to an essay in which Todd Haynes (yes, that Todd Haynes) explains how he finds inspiration for his own films in the Movie Madness collection.

When I started researching the project, I was surprised by how difficult it was to find answers to basic questions about how video stores functioned. Where did stores get their tapes, and how much did they cost? Where did hard-to-find tapes actually come from? How weird was it to work at a place with a porno section? I soon realized that while Movie
Madness is a uniquely Portland institution, with a collection shaped by the movie-watching taste of three decades of customers and staff, it also represents something else: a rare glimpse at how video stores actually operate(d). The book’s goal, then, would be to use Movie Madness as a lens to shed light on the bygone era of the video store.

For help, I enlisted Movie Madness managing director Matt Parnell and store manager Zoey Wiltsey, as well as art director Nate Ashley and contributing editor Erik Henriksen. At our beer-fueled (socially distanced) production meetings on the patio of the Horse Brass, we tossed around story ideas and brainstormed fun visual elements (like the endpapers, a collage of customer complaints left in DVD cases over the years). It was a productive and joyful collaboration, while we certainly won’t remember this pandemic fondly. I think our team will all look back with some amazement on the fact that somehow, in 2021, we made a book.

My favorite part of the process, other than the production meetings, was when we put out a call for customers to share their memories of the store. We heard from people who grew up going to Movie Madness who now take their own kids to pick out movies; people who visited the store on first dates and birthdays; people who developed their cinematic sensibilities in the stacks. These stories made it abundantly clear that, whether their last visit was two days ago or 15 years ago, Movie Madness means something to people. And that’s what we hoped to capture.

THE MAN BEHIND THE MADNESS

EXCERPTED FROM MOVIE MADNESS: 30 YEARS BEHIND THE COUNTER AT PORTLAND’S ICONIC VIDEO STORE

In 2021, to commemorate Movie Madness’s 30th anniversary, we sat down with Mike Clark, the store’s 74-year-old founder, for an in-depth interview about his career in the video store industry. The interview was conducted by Mike’s nephew Matt Parnell, who has worked at Movie Madness since 2000 and is the store’s Managing Director & Head Curator.

Can you tell us a bit about your background?
My background was in film. I started off as a film editor in 1970 at 20th Century Fox at the television lot. The first film I ever worked on was CITY BENEATH THE SEA for Irwin Allen. And I went on to work my way up through the ranks of becoming a post-production coordinator at various studios-Paramount Studios, working on RAIDERS OF THE LOST ARK, and at MGM, working on POLTERGEIST. And television shows, too. I worked on DALLAS, KNOTS LANDING, LITTLE HOUSE ON THE PRAIRIE. I really loved working in the film industry.

What inspired you to open Movie Madness?
Down in L.A., I started renting movies from various rental stores. I had to go to three or four different rental stores to get everything I wanted. And I said to myself, “Wouldn’t it be great to create a video store that specializes in everything?” Every film you wanted to see, every genre that you wanted to explore, under one roof. Instead of having to go to three or four video stores, you’d go to one. And that was always in the back of my mind.

I was under contract for MGM in the 1980s as post-production coordinator, but MGM was bought out in the late ’80s, and eventually Sony was going to take over the lot and they pink-slipped everybody. I think the last film I worked on was DEAD POETS SOCIETY for Peter Weir. I had an opportunity to go to Universal Studios and be put under contract there. And so I had to make a decision: Do I go over to Universal Studios? Or do I go with my life’s dream, which was to create this video store? I gave it a lot of thought. I wanted to go with my heart and my heart said that I wanted to create this video store.

What was that first year like for you?
It was a struggle. But I never really thought about where I was going to be tomorrow. All I could think about was today - what works and what doesn’t work. I would try something out, and if it didn’t work then I would go do something else.
else, but I just kept feeding into the store. And once people came into the store and signed up, they didn’t want to go anywhere else. And Blockbuster, of all places, along with Hollywood Video, they were sending people to us, because they didn’t have what people were looking for. The most important thing is to continue to have everything underneath one roof and something for everybody. When you walk in this store, your movie might be rented out, but you’re going to walk out with something else, and that’s important.

At some point this store became not just a video store, but a museum. How did that come about?

Many years ago when I was living in Hollywood, I went over to Grauman’s Chinese Theatre one day, and across the street they had one of those museums that was only going to be there temporarily. For the next three months they were going to be… showing the original outfits that were worn by Clark Gable and Vivian Leigh from GONE WITH THE WIND, Rudolph Valentino’s outfit from THE SHEIK, Charlie Chaplin’s cane and his “Little Tramp” outfit, the Academy Award that was awarded to Judy Garland for THE WIZARD OF OZ - all these things.

I went in and I looked at all this stuff I said, “Oh my God!” I’m looking at it up close and personal. And in the back of my mind I said to myself, “Wouldn’t it be great to one day have a business and have all these wonderful props and costumes that were used - actually used - in some of the greatest films ever made, and have them on display throughout my business?”

I never gave it any more thought until 1994. I found out through the grapevine that there was going to be an auction at Antique International [in Las Vegas] They had antiques, rare movie props, costumes, posters, you name it, and they were going to be auctioning off Godfather memorabilia. And the one thing that just caught my eye was Diane Keaton’s skirt, sweater, and blouse that she wore in THE GODFATHER PART II. And I said, “God, I would love to have that at my store, just sitting somewhere right next to the counter so people can see it.” I thought about it and I said, “Well, you know what, I’m going to bid on it.” And I ended up getting it. And once I got it, then all of the sudden reality hit. I said, “Why did I buy that? I just spent $4,000 on something and I don’t know whether it’s going to work or not at my store or whether it’s going to attract anybody!” And then of course, a couple of my staff members, they weren’t exactly thrilled about me spending my money on it. But in the back of my mind, I just kept thinking, “Maybe this will turn into something, who knows?”

A couple of months pass by, and I get a phone call from Ginger from Antique International, saying, “Mike, Shelley Winters’s dress just came in, the one that she wore in A PLACE IN THE SUN. It’s designed by Edith Head. It’s got the certificate of authenticity going with it.” I ended up buying that. And right after that came the PSYCHO knife. From then on, the collection just kept spreading and spreading. I did it as an attraction. I’m a showman, and I wanted to have people enjoy seeing these wonderful pieces.

Is there anything else that you want to share?

I want to personally thank all the wonderful people that have patronized Movie Madness over the years - and the people that are just discovering it. Thank you for continuing the legacy, continuing renting, and keeping the store alive. All you customers out there have made this store what it is today. I also want to give an equal thank you to every employee that ever worked for me, from the very beginning all the way up to who’s working in the store now. And the Hollywood Theatre, and everybody that has made the dream of Movie Madness-my dream-come to life. Let’s keep it going for decades to come, so that future generations can discover what we’ve already discovered - a love and respect for movies.

You can find the complete interview - and so much more - in our book, Movie Madness: 30 Years Behind the Counter at Portland’s Iconic Video Store. Get your copy at Powell’s, co-publishers Floating World Comics, the Hollywood Theatre merch store, and of course, Movie Madness.

This is the cream of the crop - a recap of Dan’s favorite film discoveries for the year. In his own words. Almost all of them are available at Movie Madness - check ‘em out!

I START COUNTING (1969)
Jenny Agutter stars in this British thriller as a schoolgirl who believes that her foster brother may be a serial killer. Extremely layered and complex, probably the best movie I watched all year.

I START COUNTING (1969)
A made-for-tv movie about a little girl who dies in an accident, and her ghost comes back from the dead to murder her entire family!! What?? I watched it twice.

SHOCK (1977)
A couple is terrorized by the ghost of the woman’s former husband, which possesses their young son. Directed by Mario Bava, and featuring extremely creepy in-camera effects.

SHOCK (1977)
Kim Stanley wants to prove she’s psychic so badly that she talks her husband (Richard Attenborough) into kidnapping the young daughter of a wealthy family, so she can use her “powers” to tell the police where the girl is. It all goes horribly wrong.

SEANCE ON A WET AFTERNOON (1964)
Tuesday Weld stars as a small-town woman who falls for a mentally disturbed Anthony Perkins, believing that he's a secret agent. Murder, mayhem, and double crosses ensue.

PRETTY POISON (1968)

Anthony Perkins stars in this Jekyll/Hyde tale set in the 1880s, but intentionally looking like the 1980s, with everyone having new-wave hairstyles. Perkins plays a physician who invents crack, smokes it, and becomes Jack the Ripper. Not quite as good as you want it to be, but close.

EDGE OF SANITY (1989)

Laird Cregar gives an incredible performance as a composer who suffers mysterious blackouts, and thinks he may be committing horrendous crimes during his spells. As he obsesses over his current composition, he begins to descend into madness.

HANGOVER SQUARE (1945)

Australian tale about a group of children taken hostage from school by some vicious criminals, and held for ransom in the outback. The children turn out to be incredibly resilient, and violently turn the tables on the kidnappers.

FORTRESS (1985)

Tuesday Weld stars as a small-town woman who falls for a mentally disturbed Anthony Perkins, believing that he’s a secret agent. Murder, mayhem, and double crosses ensue.
In the spring of 2021, we announced our partnership with The Lot at Zidell Yards - Portland’s premier socially-distanced outdoor performance venue - to present a series of film and live music events from May - August.

Making films available to movie lovers in early 2021 was a big challenge for theatres around the country, including the Hollywood. With our past successes presenting films outdoors at the Drive-In at the Portland Expo Center, we were thrilled to have the opportunity to show movies in another safe, socially-distanced environment like The Lot.

The Lot, located at 3030 S Moody Avenue, featured a full stage, a large format LED screen, a site-specific sound system, and on-site food and beverages for guests to enjoy from the comfort of their socially-distanced seating pod.

When we first began planning the series, we immediately reached out to Collin Hegna - acclaimed Portland-based musician, composer, and recording engineer (and known super-fan of the Hollywood and Movie Madness) - for help recruiting our musical guests. Collin is known for leading the band Federale as well as his long term stint as the bassist of The Brian Jonestown Massacre. We asked Collin to share more about his process selecting the amazing musicians who performed alongside our film programming.

Collin said, “Think of me like a sommelier, pairing a fine local live artist to an exquisitely prepared film. I wanted to feature live music from a wide array of genres across the series, and hoped that each performance would either reflect the music within the score, or the overall mood of the film.”

Thank you to everyone who came out and helped make our summer music + film series at The Lot at Zidell Yards a success!

We were thrilled to be able to bring a fun movie-going experience to our audiences yet again during summer 2021 with the 7th Annual PDX Drive-In Movie Spectacular at the Portland Expo Center. Our film series included entries from some of the Hollywood’s Signature Series like Queer Horror, #OregonMade, the Portland Black Film Festival, and more. We also continued working with acclaimed Portland-based musician Collin Hegna of Federale to book some incredible live music opening acts before our films.

A big thank you to the staff at the Portland Expo Center for inviting us to be a part of their annual drive-in event once again.
